REFUGEES IN IDAHO

The United States has been a leader in welcoming refugees who seek safety from persecution based on their race, religion, nationality, political opinion or membership in a particular social group. Following World War II, the U.S. began welcoming refugees and over time the system has evolved to have a strong infrastructure centered on public-private partnerships. Communities across the U.S. have recognized the important economic and social benefits of resettling refugees. Idaho residents have played a vital role in the resettlement program and refugees have positively contributed to New Hampshire communities. In 2016, organizations and communities across Idaho welcomed 1% of refugees arriving in the U.S. In 2016, Idaho welcomed 1,135 refugees and 39 unaccompanied children who were released to the care and custody of sponsors.

REFUGEES MAKE IDAHO STRONG

“Mother of eight children, Amina Mohamud fled her home in Somalia at age 19 due to ethnic persecution. She spent nine years in refugee camps in Kenya until her family was resettled to Boise in 2005. In 2010, she began working in her husband Yussuf’s plot, part of the Idaho Office of Refugees’ Global Gardens project, funded by the Office of Refugee Resettlement (ORR). Amina sold the family’s produce at the local farmers’ market. In 2011, she decided to cultivate her own plot after receiving grant assistance from ORR’s Refugee Agricultural Partnership Program (RAPP). With help from her children, Amina produced vegetables for the weekly Capital City Public Market, Global Gardens’ CSA (community supported agriculture), and several wholesale customers. She learned to grow, harvest, wash and package vegetables and can now complete her harvest by herself and deliver the produce to storage. While running this business, she has improved her English, math and driving skills. What’s more, Amina decided to use her cooking skills to increase the revenue from the farm. With Global Gardens’ help, she secured a small business loan to buy a fryer and now sells homemade African sambusas at the farmers’ market. She can sell sambusas after the growing season, thus extending her income into the fall and winter months.”

In addition to these agencies, many ethnic community-based organizations (ECBOs) exist throughout the state to help various refugee communities integrate and succeed in their new homes. These organizations are run by refugees to aid in the resettlement of fellow refugees by providing a variety of direct services, increasing civic participation, and preserve the community’s cultural identity and history.
