Refugees in Washington

The United States has been a leader in welcoming refugees who seek safety from persecution based on their race, religion, nationality, political opinion or membership in a particular social group. Following World War II, the U.S. began welcoming refugees and over time the system has evolved to have a strong infrastructure centered on public-private partnerships. Communities across the U.S. have recognized the important economic and social benefits of resettling refugees. Washington residents have played a vital role in the resettlement program and refugees have positively contributed to Washington communities. In 2016, organizations and communities across Washington welcomed 4% of refugees arriving in the U.S. In 2016, Washington welcomed 3,233 refugees, 136 unaccompanied refugee minors, and 476 unaccompanied children who were released to the care and custody of sponsors.

Services Available to Refugees in Washington

In addition to programming to support refugees when they first arrive to the United States, the federal government provides monetary aid through grants to the state, Voluntary Agencies, and other refugee aid organizations for community and short-term refugee support. The Washington State Department of Social and Health Services serves as the refugee resettlement office for the state. Primary program services include cash and medical assistance, access to English language classes, vocational and employment assistance. Discretionary grants are also awarded to private agencies for various other self-sufficiency programs.

Another service available to refugees in Washington is the employment Matching Grant Services, administered by Voluntary Agencies in the state. An alternative to public cash assistance, private agencies match federal contributions and provide intensive case management services to help refugees get employed and become self-sufficient within 120 days of arrival.

Refugees Make Washington Strong

“After fleeing violence in Iraq with her young family, Taghreed had trouble coping with life as a refugee. "Do something you love," suggested her mother. So Taghreed started baking, finding comfort in the familiar scents of spices from home. The IRC helped her begin a baking career, and now she works at a popular pastry shop near where she lives in Seattle. Her son Yousif says he’s proud of his courageous mom.” After gaining an Associate’s Degree in Culinary Arts, Taghreed was hired by Bakery Noveau in Seattle, where she teaches the other chefs new recipes from her country and sets a powerful example for her son on the ability of a mom to have success at work and at home.
